CONSENT FOR USE OF TEXT MESSAGE, VOICEMAIL AND EMAIL

Anderson Integrative Medicine would like to make increasing use of new technologies to communicate with patients. In order to deliver care to you as efficiently as possible, and for your convenience, it is often helpful to communicate with you over the phone, by leaving voicemails, or through texting and emailing. Please be advised, however, that communicating over texting, voicemail, and email is inherently insecure. We take your privacy very seriously, and therefore we may only communicate with you in these ways with your informed consent.

Our practice utilizes a secure, encrypted email provider when we need to email you records or other materials. We do not have an encrypted text messaging service; while you are free to text the Practice, we need your consent to respond or text you anything other than appointment reminders. Text messages may be inadvertently read by other individuals, and to the extent text messages are sent unencrypted, the data can be at risk. Similarly, voicemails can impact the security of health care information if they are accessed by individuals other than the intended recipient.

Please indicate below whether and to what extent we can communicate with you utilizing these methods. Participation in these types of communications is entirely voluntary.
